

Our methodology

In 2016, Deloitte surveyed 3,000 Millennial and approximately 1,500 general population high-frequency (2+ visits per week) guests who visited Quick Service Restaurant, Fast Casual, and Casual Dining locations. In a separate part of the same fact-finding process, we carried out over 20 interviews with restaurant industry executives to discuss their organizations' current and desired levels of digital technology strategy, adoption, and plans ahead. Finally, we hosted a roundtable discussion of restaurant industry trends at Deloitte University in Westlake, Texas.

NEXT-GENERATION GUEST EXPERIENCE: TRENDS FOR EXECUTIVES

RESTAURANTS ARE FAST FOLLOWING WHERE RETAILERS HAVE GONE IN THE PAST DECADE

Many customers expect seamless / engaging technology experiences. Restaurants have had to respond to a customer's desire for an omni-channel experience.

WAR FOR TALENT

Many executives and digital leaders are moving and shifting. Required competencies, career paths, and incentives should be adjusted to entice, galvanize, and reward the talent that will make a difference.

I.T. HAS MORE GOING ON THAN EVER... ALL AT ONCE

I.T. has had to drastically expand capabilities (e.g., social, analytics, loyalty, cyber) in a race to win in the digital world. The right capabilities and partners are critical.

SETTING UP FROM THE EDGE

Some separation from the traditional business may drive more rapid innovation and speed to market.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU WISH FOR

With tech driving customer demand, restaurant leaders need to more cohesively consider restaurant operational impacts.

DIGITAL POSES NEW RISKS

Increased penetration to digital means new risks that restaurants may not be equipped to understand or address.

DIGITAL STRATEGY CAN'T BE DONE IN A VACUUM

It will likely require new types of collaboration between I.T. and other functions (e.g., marketing, training).

KNOW THYSELF

Not all technology solutions are appropriate across restaurant types or food types.
